A BEWITCHED HERMIT.

Mrs. Hamblin and her Cow. A correspondent of the Ameria (N. Y. mes has written for that journal an acat of a singular old hermit, named David Tonkery-or better known as Old Tonkery, the Hermit-who formerly livtin a hut situated in a wild ravine, or mountain slope, near Mount Riga, in the hearlighborhood of Amenia. Where this principle of the control of the c trange character came from no one the various cliques will advance the prices next week. Mariposa preferred took a sudden downand huntred acres. The thoughts and conversations of this old man were always about witches, and, like most hermits he was a woman hater—not allowing one to enter his dwelling, as he always kept a gin loaded with a silver ball ready to shoot any witches that might molest him. bonds, Tennessees and South Carolinas were sent any witches that might molest him. knew. He brought plenty of money, and shoot any witches that might molest him. At night he always placed his gun across two chairs, the muzzle pointing direct towards the door. He owned a fine strawberry patch, and would allow schoolgirls to pick all they wished, except the black-eyed ones; these he would march oil his premises instanter.

He was never known to harm but one He was never known to narm but one reson; that was a poor widow woman the name of Mra. Hamblin. Her cow d wandered from home, and she went the mountain to the old man's farm at before dark and climbing upon a fence oked over his farm for the lost cow. The looked over his farm for the lost cow. The old hermit saw her, and it so happened that there came a hurricane or very heavy wind that night, and blew dewn a grove of very fine chestnut timber for old Tonkery. He thought at once that the poor woman was a witch and had been up the night before to see where she could do him the greatest damage. A lew days atter he met the woman in the road. He caught her and with a sharp stone cut a cross on her forcead between the eyes, to kill the witches in her, he-said. But this proved a dear witch to old Tonkery, for oved a dear witch to old Tonkery, for e sucd him and recovered damages to amount of six hundred dollars, and

He did his own cooking, washing and cousekeeping, and hired help to do his arm work when necessary. When visi-ers came to see him, if he liked their psearance, he would give then apples decider. His chief study was how he ould rid himself of pestering witches; he became advanced in age, fancies aw upon him and his imagination was sessisted and excited by a wicked neighbor who sought to get the old man's property by flattery and deceit. He willed his property to the finan, but 'the town authorities interfered, and when at last the old hermit arrived at the point of death he was taken in charge by the poor master and cared for until his demis. The will was broken and the property ap-propriated to the support of the town ney buried on the premises, and more money buffed on the premises, and more or less search has been made every year by different parties to find it, but no money was ever discovered, we believe, until about one year age a man by the name of Abyron Bishop while picking whortleberries in the vicinity, found a wooden trough hidden in a ledge of rocks. wooden trough indden in a fedge of rocks, ferest was his surprise on pulling it out to find it filled with silver coin; the shiny pieces were of all descriptions, many of them as bright as when first from the mint. The man that found the trough was so excited that he ran down the was so excited that he ran down the mountain scattering the silver pieces as he ran, and screaming at the top of his voice, "The devil is after me! the devil is after me!" The box was supposed to contain over one hundred dollars. The trough with over twenty dollars of the money is now in possession of George Dakin, o Vanut Ries.

A Man Shoots Himself in the Presence of his Affianced.

Saturday Evening's Star. Mr. William J. Brooke, a native of Prince George county, Md., but for sev-eral years past a resident of this city, committed suicide about half past seven oclock has evening, in ficuse No. 731 8th street, immediately south of the Cav-airy Baptist Church, by shooting himself alry Baptist Church, by shooting himself in the head with a small. Derringer pistol, the ball entering the right temple, indicting a wound from which he died about two hours after the shooting. It is stated that for some time past his has been paying attentions to Miss Julia E. Burke, who had rooms in this house, in which he also had apartments—on the floor above and that he was ENGAGED TO BE MARRIED

r. He stepped into her sitting-roo st evening, and had some conversation with her, during which he appeared to be with her, during which he appeared to be laboring under excitement, as if he had been drinking. She remonstrated with him, and he promised that although for the past three weeks he had imbibed rather freely, he would in future lead a better and more solver life. Shortly after-wards he again became excited, and rising from the rocking chair where he had been sitting, he put his hand behind his back and drew from from a pocket in the back part of his pantaloons a small Derringer pistol, with which he committed the deed. Miss Burke immediately gave the alarm. better and more sober life. Shortly after-

A Steubenville Snake Hunter

A few days since a youth named Har residing in the lower suburbs of the city, was bitten, it is supposed fatally, by one of the most poisonous of reptiles—a large copperhend snake. The lad has been in a precarious condition since, as his blood appears to be completely inused with the wenom of the snake, so poisonous was the bite. The snake escaped, much to the uneasiness of the people in the neighborhood, who instituted a search for it without success. An employee of the Jefferson from Works, named Wells, hearing of the comparators, voluntered to son Iron Works, named volunteered to of the circumstance, volunteered to capture the snake if he was anywhere in capture the snake if he was anywhere in capture the snake if he was anywhere in the wood by smelling it out. Many being without faith, as to his ability to do what he claimed, accompanied the man with the singular organ of smell to the place where the snake was last seen. Wells immediately took up, the scent of the reptile and followed the meanderings the reptile and followed the meanderings along the creek to the wood, and in the incredible space of half an hour had captured and dispatched him, although many had scoured the neighborhood for the same purpose. It is said this specie of snake has a peculiar smell, partaking of the odor of fresh occumbers, and that an expert snake hunter can tell of the venomous reptiles presence considerance distance away, but few, however, have the faculty to follow up the acent sufficiently close to catch the creepers.

Another Enterprising Girl.

A terrible accident occurred near the West Va. O. & L. Co.'s bank on last Friday afternoon, by which the eldest daughter of John Lafferty met her death. She was attempting to kindle a fire by a liberal use of refined petroleum; the cam exploded; and she was immediately enveloped in flames. She only sarvived six hours, when death put an end to her sufferings. Let this serve as a warning to parents
